Conclusion -

A good conclusion will summarize the points introduced in the thesis statement and discussed in the essay. It also re-states the thesis statement in a different way than the introduction. The introduction and conclusion often use similar wording to complement each another. Finally, give a good conclusion will give the reader something interesting to think about. In an argumentative essay, this may include "call to action" which means you encourage the reader to do something as a result of reading your argument.

Your thesis re-stated in a different way: Thomas Tefferson helped America gain independence from Great Britain, designed Monticello as well as the Rotunda in Richmond and Founded one of the oldest universities in the State of Virginia.
